Dan Rather watches the action and wonders if the unbelievable is true. A local detective finds evidence that suggests a serial killer may have caused the death. Join lawmen Roger Braverman and John Parker on a wild chase that leads them from the Blue Ridge Mountains to the Smokies to solve the murder of a young man.The present invention generally relates to a method and a system for characterizing and classifying particles. In particular, the present invention provides a method and a system which characterize particles using an optical detector. It is desirable to be able to classify particles, such as cells or other microstructures, and determine their properties such as size and surface characteristics. As used herein, "cell" is intended to include the class of microstructures and all microstructures to which the method and system of the present invention are applicable. Cells having other shapes or aspects of structure, such as filaments and microcapillaries, are also within the scope of the present invention. Conventional methods for classifying cells based on size include using a sedimentation chamber. As used herein, a "sedimentation chamber" is defined as a chamber in which particles may be allowed to settle for a period of time. Often, fluid containing particles enters the sedimentation chamber to be settled. The sedimentation chamber is often a cylindrical vessel having one end that connects to a process chamber (or to a sedimentation chamber, for multiple vessels). The other end of the sedimentation chamber is connected to a fluid feed line. The fluid flow line may connect to a reagent feed line and a fluid collection line. The fluid flow line may also connect to an optical detection system in order to observe cells passing through the sedimentation chamber. In the sedimentation chamber, the microstructures may settle from the fluid to a bottom chamber, referred to herein as
